F0682

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A system automatically establishes a trunk between first and second network devices. The system monitors a source address and destination addresses in packets destined to or received from the second network device and determines whether a communication pattern

5   exists. When a communication pattern is determined to exist, the system automatically establishes the trunk between the first network device and second network device.